The run was planned with a motive to make public aware about how can we ourselves save the Environment rather blaming others. Through the slogans of "Say No to Plastics", "Pool the conveyance", "Use different Coloured Dustbins for different type of garbage" etc. the volunteers were trying to open up the various options available to protect the environment.

The Director appraised students about the seminal works of Leonard Sax (A Practising American Psychologist), like 'Boys Adrift', 'Girls on the Edge' and 'Why Gender Matters' to set the tone. The lecture started with the biological and psychological concept of transgender community. It was only later in 2019 that transgender were considered as third gender and also included inter-sex. The Speaker highlighted that how in Indian history this gender was given special status in epics like Ramayana and Mahabharata but with time the social condition of transgender deteriorated especially in the British regime. The Speaker also discussed that it was in 2019 when finally an Act for protection of Transgender Rights in India has been passed. The social hardships faced by transgender were also discussed. The alarming picture of Indian schools and colleges for transgender children and youth is heart throbbing. It is their struggle for social acceptance which is ultimately leading to suicides. Speaker concluded her talk by highlighting that it's time that this huge legal gap should be walked into. 'Being Trans isn't choice, being transphobic is' was imbibed by students. Ultimately the speaker was diligently able to sensitize them about gender equity.
